ᐅᐅᐅᐅᐅᐅ pêhonân

Ongoing throughout the Festival

Where the Fringe Theatre Arts Barns stands today is a “meeting place” or “waiting place” known in Nêhiyawêwin as ᐅᐅᐅᐅᐅᐅ pêhonân, where for time immemorial people have traveled from up and down river to share in community, story, feast, and celebration. We honour the tradition and responsibility of upholding the intention of this meeting place through intentional curation by Fringe Theatre’s Indigenous Director MJ Belcourt Moses. From KidsFringe to ATB Stage, and the mikiwahp on Cypher (aka 85) Avenue to our indoor stages, we invite you to celebrate Indigenous performances, installations, and stories across the Festival Grounds.
